

To John Brice

21 Ap 41.

My dear Sir

I am very sorry that I gave you the trouble of writing to Mr Price. The fact is that he died before the commencement of the Camden year, and his widow does not feel justified in continuing her subscription to the Society.

I sold her books
for her some time ago and made a good bargain

for her, by adding to them a copy of the Egerton Papers which I gave her.

This is just the state of the case, only you ~~of~~ ought to have been informed of it earlier.

Knowing your hand
& the business of your letter I opened it.

I fear that you have had a troublesome
business with the sects of the Perry Society. However, as well as I can understand it is not much in arrears - indeed

not at all taking into account the stock of books on hand.

I had a note from Ames yesterday telling me that the Auditor
had been obliged to adjourn.

Now would you print
"making the green one red"
Macbeth II sc 2.

"making the green one red"
or

"making the green - one red."

At your perfect
leisure, reply.

Yrs most sincerely

24 B.S.
